FACE TIME

Michel Haddi has been held at gun point, crossed paths with Osama Bin Laden, and photographed war-torn territories. Yet it's his fearless celebrity portraiture for which he's best known. JOSH SIMS meets the master

MADONNA SEDESSEN, HADDI & MOORE, MAGAZINE, PARIS, 2000. "Madonna is a very special person. I've known her for many years. She's very close friends. Being the publisher of the magazine, she has been educated by her own, eating, wine and beautiful with her friends. She is really quite elegant. She is the best."

“Every time I go to Paris I still get a knot in my stomach because they look at me differently

→ accept that someone [who doesn't follow the prescribed social pathway] has been successful abroad, made it in Milan or London. "Every time I go to Paris I still get a knot in my stomach because they look at me differently. They just don't understand why I'm such a cool guy."

How annoyed they must be then that Haddi has produced so many iconic images over his four decades of photography. Intriguingly, he attributes this to having - wisely, it might seem - practised martial arts for years. It's been about mastering - his analogy - the repetitive, steady breathwork up, breathe down of the Karate Kid, to the point where it finally becomes "a scraping off, back to the essence of something, so you end up with just short, very precise movements up and down instead," he explains - kind of.

"An iconic photograph scrapes off all the unnecessary [visual clutter] too. No tricks. No palaver. The bare minimum. But you can't force that. It has to come naturally. I think a lot of [journalists] today is just trying too hard. Of course, you can't decide to make an iconic image. It just happens, or it doesn't."

Either way, Haddi must feel on slightly safer, calmer ground - fewer egos, fewer AK-47s - with his latest project, a series of still-life flower photographs, ready for an exhibition and book later this year. The result of a pandemic lockdown project - "my wife, who is also a photographer, and I made a pact that we would work every day, train every day and drink wine every night!" he laughs - these are not the usual flower photos but as close to portraiture as flower photos can get.

"It's flowers with sex and blood," Haddi enthuses. "Lots of photographers have done flowers before or seem to be doing them now - Irving Penn, Nick Knight, Rankin - but it's always pretty, very nice. That's fine but I want to push the envelope."

"Friends are saying when they look at these photos they see cock and pussy. Since I can't publish pornography in a fashion magazine, I have to do it a different way."

Of course he does. Michael Haddi, ladies and gentlemen: French revolutionary, beach runner, bullet dodger, ferish florist, and really quite a good photographer. ■

SHOW TIME

Michael Haddi's works will be on display at PhotoLondon from 10-14 May at the 20 Arts in Progress Gallery stand G22 alongside the works of Rankin, Gian Paolo Barbieri and Toni Menezzese. He will be doing a special book signing for his latest book on Sunday 13 May at 15.00 on the stand. The new work, The Legend, is a limited edition book dedicated to some Moss composed of Polaroids, snapped in 1991 that had been lost for 25 years.

LINDA EVANGELISTA, BETTIN VOGUE, LONDON, 1990. "This image was shot on the set of one of George Michael's greatest videos - Freedom (which he filmed that week on the set of the video). I was the director of all scenes with an emotional and dramatic, that other side of shooting. I had had enough of hearing the assistant, screaming like I was being on a 100m budget film. I decided to shoot only the scenes and, happily for me, it worked."

ON ASSIGNMENT

What is interesting about photographing people is that, by putting them into a sequence, into your own world, you create something that doesn't exist and it is a total illusion. This is what I love, to take a talent to another place.

It is very important to have some ideas, wherever they come from – references such as movies, paintings, whatever you fancy – then when the idea begins to sink deep in you and you think you know what you are going to do... be open to changing everything at the last minute.

When I worked with Liza Minnelli, all I wanted was that look and soft smile, looking like her mother, Judy Garland, but she was for a simple reason that she had a bad hip at the time. And Kate Moss reminded me of the Little Mermaid of Copenhagen.

Show the love

To succeed, you need to have a lot of love, empathy and you have to be sensitive enough not to upset people. You need to have a great sense of humour, be light on your feet, and don't assume that you are the star – they are – and so whatever you do, you need to be easy on them.

Back in the nineties and noughties, magazines had tremendous budgets, even a small magazine would send you to shoot in a different time zone somewhere. I don't want to sound like an old fart, but the models were one of the most incredible areas for fashion shoots, whereas nowadays, because of Covid and with magazines working on very tight budgets, most of the shoots end up in a studio; they're very local, so to speak.

I have photographed women all over the world, but I always depended on the subjects. It was lucky that I lived in Los Angeles, so to work with Cameron Diaz it was normal to photograph her in my studio in Los Angeles. Kate Moss and I both lived in New York, so when GQ asked me to shoot her I was there, and the same with Liza Minnelli. But my base was always England, so I worked with Uma Thurman for British Vogue for that reason, and in Paris with Maria Barenson. As I am a Parisian and I have a place there, it is all about people and places, always!

A woman's world

Michel Haddi has captured some of the world's most glamorous women, with a selection to be showcased in the Photo London exhibition

My images are all about women: strong women, their attitude, their beauty and the story they have to tell, what they represent in our society and the empowerment of their own self-respect. Without them I would never have become the man I am; women taught me respect. When the gallery 29 Arts in Progress looked at my work, they saw something that even I didn't see; there is a continuity in my work and I was blind to it. What they saw was, perhaps, reflected in the adoration I have for women, and I suppose they saw the quintessential focal point of my work. You see, an artist is not – and cannot be – the judge of his own work, while a third entity is able to go deeper and bring out the truth and talent of an artist. And 29 Arts in Progress has a real eye for this. What can I say – they have represented one of my idols since I was 20 years old, Gian Paolo Barbieri, so I knew that I couldn't go too far wrong!

I love the quality of Nikon kit. I loved, for years, the Nikon F2 as I used it with a special lens, the Nikkor 50mm f/1.2, which was the best lens ever made, but someone stole it from me in a hotel. I use a Nikon mirrorless Z9 with all the goodies these days; it's always about the quality and Nikon is the spearhead.

Milan-based gallery 29 Arts in Progress will be exhibiting at Photo London 2023 (Stand 027, Courtyard Pavilion, Somerset House, London, May 30-14, 2023). Featuring unposed black and white portraits by French photographer Michel Haddi, unconventional colour works by Italian master of fashion photography Gian Paolo Barbieri, large-format Polaroids of ethereal women by the eclectic Italian artist Toni Menezzato, and rare Polaroids of iconic celebrities supermodels by renowned British photographer Rankin. ■

Kate Moss poses topless in rare 32-year old images from celebrated photographer Michel Haddi as they go on display at a new exhibition of his work in London

Rare snaps of supermodel Kate Moss taken by legendary photographer Michel Haddi are to go on display at an exhibition in London.

Haddi has photographed a host of celebrities, including Jennifer Lopez, Clint Eastwood, David Bowie, Tupac Shakur and Sir Sean Connery, and will showcase his images of other stars such as Uma Thurman and Linda Evangelista at international photography fair Photo London this month.

He recently discovered a series of rare Polaroid photos - while cleaning out his storage - of British supermodel Moss, in which he said she looks "very powerful".

The images now form part of his new book, The Legend - Kate Moss.

The photographer, who has had studios in London and California, said: 'It made me very happy... to look at the past because I met Kate back in the 90s when she was not known in LA.'

Couch potato kids' hearts are damaged

INACTIVE children are at risk of an enlarged heart while still in their teens, a study has revealed.

Lying around for eight hours a day raised their heart mass three times more than those who exercised for 49 minutes – upping the risk of heart attacks and strokes.

The study was carried out by Bristol and Exeter Universities and University of Eastern Finland, using data from 530 teens.

The findings were found in teens irrespective of their weight.

Dr Andrew Aghaj, of UEF, warned: "Among adults an increase may increase the risk of death by 7% to 20%."

Homeowners stay in due to burglary fear

PEOPLE are staying in at night and using DIY home security because they are afraid of being burgled.

Four in 10 adults have installed CCTV, stronger locks, alarms or camera doorbells in the past year.

And 6% have bought a dog to ward off criminals.

One in five adults avoids leaving the house in the dark, a survey of 2,000 people found.

More than 200,000 burglaries went unsolved by police last year, according to the Lib Dem's.

The party is calling for a burglary response guarantee. Leader Ed Davey said: "It is a scandal that millions of Brits are turning to DIY security."

Young people getting stuck in the sticks

YOUNG people from rural and coastal areas face being trapped in "social mobility cold spots".

Around 2.2 million of them are half as likely to go to university and twice as likely to give up pursuing aspirational careers.

This is due to a combination of low parental incomes, lack of work experience placements and an absence of professional networks, the poll by The Talent Tap and The Aldridge Foundation found.

Talent Tap CEO Naomi Ambrose said: "If firms really believe in diversity and equality, much more needs to be done to [get these] young people into high-quality employment."

She's off to a Kate start

KATE Moss shows her potential to develop into a supermodel in this Polaroid from the 1990s.

Photographer Michel Haddi found a series of Polaroids of Moss, now 49, during a clearout and used them as the basis for his book The Legend - Kate Moss.

He said: "I met Kate back in the 90s when she was not known in LA. I said, 'Oh my God, this girl is like a dream!'"

£2m Lotto fraudster could lose his home

Rapist refused to pay 'win' back

EXCLUSIVE
BY DAN WARBURTON

LOTTO conman Edward Putman could be stripped of his home after losing a court battle to keep control of his illegal £2.5million fortune, the Daily Mirror can reveal.

Prosecutors have been granted special powers to sift through the convicted rapist's ill-gotten gains after he refused to hand back the money.

And he now risks losing his £700,000 property, damaged in a recent arson attack, as forensic accountants look to sell his possessions and settle his debts.

They could also look at any hidden assets, with reports previously saying he splashed the cash on a fleet of luxury cars as well as properties in Florida and Malta.

The convicted sex offender, 57, was sentenced to nine years in 2019 for scamming Camdout out of the jackpot with a forged ticket.

He was ordered to pay back £940,000 of the jackpot under the Proceeds of Crime Act.

But after he chose to pay back less than £100,000 of his dodgy fortune, prosecutors have been granted an enforcement receiver order at St Albans crown court, Herts.

The order gives bailiffs the power to "take possession of assets, sell them and pay money to the courts", including the home in Kings Langley.

A source said: "Putman had the chance to settle up but he's too greedy. Now it's out of his hands."

"The authorities are desperate to get the cash back. They won't stand by and let him squirrel away the cash."

"Putman played the coward and tried to fight the application but prosecutors won."

Putman, jailed for seven years in 1993 for raping a pregnant 17-year-old, bribed Lotto insider Giles Knibbs, 38, to forge a ticket.

He was found out when Knibbs, upset at not getting his "fair share" of the scam, left an incriminating suicide note in 2015.

A friend of Mr Knibbs said: "The least he could do is pay back the money. Giles lost his life because of his cruelty."

Police are continuing to probe the suspected arson attack at Putman's home last October.

Putman played the coward and tried to fight the application but prosecutors won.

Putman, jailed for seven years in 1993 for raping a pregnant 17-year-old, bribed Lotto insider Giles Knibbs, 38, to forge a ticket.

He was found out when Knibbs, upset at not getting his "fair share" of the scam, left an incriminating suicide note in 2015.

10 - 14 May: Michel Haddi At Photo London

London's biggest photography fair, Photo London, takes over Somerset House for four days. French fashion photographer Michel Haddi, who shot Kate Moss for British GQ back in 1991, will be displaying his work at the 29 Arts in Progress Gallery booth for the weekend. As well as miss Moss, Haddi has shot global icons like David Bowie, Liza Minnelli, Denzel Washington, Aretha Franklin, Uma Thurman, and Linda Evangelista. Sunday 13th May at 3pm on the stand Michel will be signing copies of the new book of polaroids, Kate Moss The Legend. Across the rest of the fair, see work from photo icons such as Martin Parr, Peter Lindbergh, Nan Goldin and countless others. photolondon.org

Prada's Sporty Side

Prada has named Chinese basketball player Sheng-Yang as its latest brand ambassador.

The athlete appeared in a series of photographs in short films, wearing pieces from the brand's latest menswear collection and playing with red basketballs, or listening to music from a vintage turntable.

With more than 3 million followers on Weibo, China's largest social media platform, Sheng-Yang is a former basketball player and a rising star in the Chinese sports scene.

The brand also named Sheng-Yang as its ambassador for the Tokyo 2020 Olympic campaign, featuring him in a series of short films, including one with the Chinese national water polo team member Jiang Dun.

The shift in Prada's celebrity endorsement strategy in China comes after the brand's previous 2019 campaign featured actor Zhang Shuang, who was caught in a highly publicized sex dispute.

The brand's other ambassadors from China include singer Cai Xukun, whose appointment of Prada's 100th anniversary ($3.7 million) marked a new era in the brand's relationship with China, and actress Chao Xue. —JENNIFER J. JONES

Scholarly Chic

Custom clients can come from many walks of life, including academics.

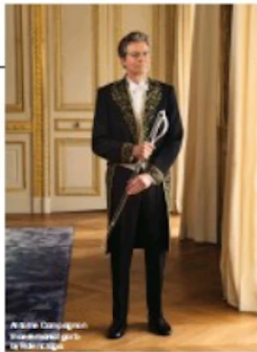

French literary critic, writer and publisher Antoine Compagnon commissioned an ensemble for the "T-shirt" brand's 100th anniversary collection in the Académie Française.

The ensemble's look includes a sweater and a pair of navy suit trousers with green velvet olive branches. According to the brand, which was founded in 1913 after a 100-year absence, this is the first time since the house was founded by Cristóbal Balenciaga in 1947 that it was designed to celebrate a centennial.

Created by creative director Demna Gvasalia, the look is a nod to the brand's 100th anniversary, which was celebrated in 1947.

Her gender-neutral appearance comes in a series of photographs in short films, wearing pieces from the brand's latest menswear collection and playing with red basketballs, or listening to music from a vintage turntable.

Kate Moss fans are in for a treat as some unearthed photos of the supermodel are going on display at a new exhibition.

The snaps were taken 23 years ago by celebrity photographer Michel Haddi, who has worked with the likes of Linda Evangelista and David Bowie.

Michel says he discovered the polaroid photos of Kate, now 49, during a spot of spring cleaning and is now showcasing the "powerful" images, which can also be seen in his book, The Legend - Kate Moss.

The photographer, who has worked in London and California, said: 'It made me very happy... to look at the

This month, the work of world-renowned photographer Michel Haddi is being featured at the international photography fair, Photo London.

Michel Haddi's photography career is nothing short of remarkable.

He has immortalised the faces of some of the most legendary figures of our time, including David Bowie, Aretha Franklin, Johnny Depp and Heath Ledger. His work has graced the pages of the most prestigious fashion magazines in the world, including Vogue and GQ.

Born in Paris to an Algerian Muslim mother and a French soldier he never knew, Haddi climbed to the top of his field, and has spent over 30 years capturing intimate moments and the essence of all those he photographed.

This month, the international photography fair, Photo London, is featuring a collection of his captivating work, presented by 29 Arts In Progress.

Among the highlights are some rare polaroids of Kate Moss that were recently discovered after being lost in storage in Venice Beach for 25 years.

The National Accountability Bureau is Pakistan's powerful and corruption-orientated organization that has detained and investigated former officials, including prime ministers, politicians and retired military officers. But some view the NAB as a tool used by those in power, especially the military, to crack down on political opponents. When Khan was in power, his government arrested Sharif, then the opposition leader, through the NAB.

At a news conference, Law Minister Azam Tarrar said Khan was arrested because he was not cooperating with the investigations. He also denounced the violence by Khan supporters, saying that protests must remain peaceful.

"It should have not happened," he said, shortly after TV video never reach the same icon status of the self-titled LP and some of the tracks have aged like milk (Black Gold is particularly problematic) and don't come at me with the 'anti-political correctness anthem' argument).

But overall, 'Yellowed Ground' is a much better album than most people give it credit for.

Musically, it's more diverse than 'Violent Femmes' making it feel less cohesive at the outset but more interesting the more you listen to it. The Femmes explore a huge range of styles, from country to folk to gospel to blues, bringing in new instruments like the banjo, piano, saxophone and marimba.

The tone also feels decidedly more grown up than its predecessor. Even though Geno wrote the songs around the same time, 'Yellowed Ground' addresses darker themes like poverty, apocalypses, religion and murder. I will say, however, it's also decidedly less fun to sing along to. Can't have it all, I guess.

The opening track, 'Country Death Song' is one of the grimmest songs in the band's repertoire, a first-person account of a farmer in the American Civil War who loses his mind and throws his daughter down a well.

Plagued by guilt, he later kills himself. Based on a true story, the murder ballad is a chilling gothic snapshot held together by Geno's folksy, disarming and a jingly banjo, a real gem that's moved from the sophomore slump and into the Femmes' Best Of.

Other standout tracks for me include 'Never Tell', an evolved version of 'To The Kill' from the self-titled LP, which Geno characteristically carries for over 7 minutes. Also the moody title track, which starts with a spoken-word Bible quote (Geno's father was a Baptist minister) before delving into a contemplation of nuclear holocaust.

My personal favourite is 'Sweet Misery Blues', a light and bouncy folk punk ditty that reminds the listener not to dwell on the past. It's a much needed feel-good reprieve in what turns out to be a roller coaster of an album.

For a band like Violent Femmes, which for 40 years has been seen as something of a one-trick pony or the musical equivalent of 'Catcher in the Rye', 'Yellowed Ground' is a giant middle finger to the music industry and listeners of music in general. It's a defiant testament to the band's refusal to do what's expected of them.

Bessie Brian Ritchie put it best in a 2014 interview with The Guardian: 'The Femmes have always been about the music. Gordon never cared about being famous. The key to longevity is to doggedly pursue your ideas to their conclusion.'

And you can say what you want about 'Yellowed Ground' but it is nothing if not the Femmes' wildest ideas doggedly pursued to their conclusion. It may not match the cult status that 'Violent Femmes' has ascended to, but it stands the test of time in a way that its predecessor perhaps does not.

"You see a dead man": Legendary photographer Michel Haddi recalls working with Tupac

Therese Ferreira

Michel Haddi's photography career is nothing short of remarkable.

He has immortalised the faces of some of the most legendary figures of our time, including David Bowie, Aretha Franklin, Johnny Depp and Heath Ledger. His work has graced the pages of the most prestigious fashion magazines in the world, including Vogue and GO.

Born in Paris to an Algerian Muslim mother and a French soldier he never knew, Haddi climbed to the top of his field, and has spent over 30 years capturing iconic moments and the essence of all those he photographed.

This month, the International Photography Fair, Photo London, is featuring a collection of his captivating work, presented by 29 Arts in Progress.

Among the highlights are some rare polaroids of Kate Moss that were recently discovered after being lost in storage in Venice Beach for 25 years.

The exhibition will also include unconventional colour works by Italian master of fashion photography Gian Paolo Barbieri, large format Polaroids of eternal women by the iconic Italian Artist Toni Meneguzzo, and rare Polaroids of iconic '80s supermodels by British photographer Rankin.

Buenos Aires caught up with Haddi ahead of Photo London, which runs from 11 to 14 May at Somerset House.

In this interview, we delve into some of the most exciting and memorable moments of his career, including his awe-inspiring first encounter with the late Tupac Shakur and the day he photographed the Red Hot Chili Peppers breaking down the Berlin Wall.

Haddi also shares his perspective on the intersection between martial arts and photography, as well as his insights on the potential impact of artificial intelligence on the art world.

Ferreira Culture: Can you recall your first encounter with Kate Moss?
Michel Haddi: The first time I met Kate, I was working for Inter- view Magazine in Los Angeles, and I was working with Lolita Davidovich, who was at the time a very big actress. So I'm shooting Lolita, and there comes a girl with this kind of very London accent, and she's a friend of a British style I worked with at the time, Kim Bowen.

She was like a butterfly. Kim introduced me to Kate and she was like a butterfly. While I was shooting Lolita, she asked me 'Do you mind if I go and sunbathe by the pool?'. And I said, 'Of course'.

I never ended up shooting Kate that day. But a few months later I'm back in New York and Blown Away magazine's ask me to do a very big shoot. And they said, 'Well there is a new girl in town. She just did Calvin Klein and she's going to be a big star. Her name is Kate Moss'. And I burst out laughing and said, 'Of course it is'. She was absolutely fabulous and she's one of the best girl I've ever worked with.

You seem to place great value on the role of women in your life. Could you share more about what has led to your profound appreciation for women?

Well, I was raised by a single mother who worked as a chambermaid in top hotels her whole life. As she was a single Muslim woman who lived through the Algerian war and came to Paris in the 1960s, she never learned to read or write. But I saw her as a remarkably strong woman from a young age and it made me realise the power of women. As simple as that.

As a photographer, I find women to be extremely powerful and beautiful. This perspective was largely influenced by Helmut Newton, whose work features strong, fabulous women who eschew dominance. When I capture photographs of women, I strive to depict them in a similar light – as powerful, dominant, and inherently beautiful beings.

Can you share with us your earliest memories of photography and what inspired you to pursue it as a career?

When I was young, my family moved to one of the worst suburbs in Paris, and I knew that if I didn't get out, I would probably end up as a real hardcore gangster, in jail or dead. But eventually, we were able to move to a better part of the city, which was very vibrant and alive with artists and photographers.

As a teenager, I worked in a very popular gay restaurant, where top models and icons like Grace Jones would come and go. It was around the time that a friend sold me a camera. I started experimenting with photography. I took pictures of a stunning girl from school who had beautiful green eyes and brunette hair. I got the photos developed at the best lab in town and I realised that I had a gift for it.

Is there anyone on your bucket list that you have yet to photograph?

Well there is a new generation. I love Rihanna. I find her extremely beautiful. And I love Timothée Chalamet. And I mean of course Taylor Swift, she's very interesting.

What was it like working with Tupac?

At the time, I was living in Venice Beach, California when The Source magazine approached me about photographing Tupac. And during that period, gangster rap was at its peak and there were quite a few killings. Tupac also certainly had a reputation. Anyway, he'd just finished filming John Singleton's poetic justice film with Laurence Fishburne who I worked with later. When he arrived at the studio I was struck by his elegance and politeness. I told him instantly, 'My friend, you remind me of a young Martin Luther King'.

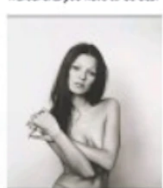

But the terrible tragedy for me about these photos is that when you look at them you see right away a dead man. When I saw him, I saw Martin Luther King in him, and when I took his picture his eyes were closed. It was a premonition. But the guy had a fabulous soul. And it was clear he was a poet and a true artist.

In addition to your illustrious career as a photographer, you are also an accomplished martial artist, having dedicated yourself to the discipline since the age of 16. Given your experience in both mediums, can you speak to the ways in which your practices in photography and martial arts intersect and inform one another?

This is a very good question. You're the first person to ask me this.

Well, there is definitely an intersection between the two. I dedicate my life to my family, my wife, photography and martial arts. With martial arts you have to be disciplined to get better everyday. I am 67 now but I still train four times a week at 6am in the gym. It's a must for me because my martial arts helps me tremendously with my photography. It allows me to be so open with photography in trying to find new concepts and new ideas. I like to take the energy from martial arts and bring it to my photography. I hope it's able to do both for a long long time.

AI technology has revolutionised the way we approach photography. But it has also sparked issues surrounding authenticity and creativity. What are your thoughts on the role of AI in photography, and how do you see it affecting the future of your craft?

Well in order to take words and generate them in images, first you need a base of images. So you have to steal millions of images. So already if you're stealing you're going to have a problem, because you're going to have a lot of lawsuits. And this is already happening.

But I feel like the computer will never be like an actual human being. I'm able to talk to you, at the same time look out of the window and all of these things. The computer will not be able to do all of these things.

With all this technology emerging, art coming from the heart is going to be even more valuable now. For me AI is going to be terrific for all the work I'm doing on Photoshop. It'll be able to work faster and have new techniques to make my images better. But creating art itself, it's never going to match.

What is one of your most memorable shoots?

When I photographed the Red Hot Chili Peppers during the fall of the Berlin Wall. I was at the right place at the right time. It was 9 November 1989.

I was in the studio working with the guys. And then this group of German people said to me, 'Today we are breaking the wall down'. So I looked at Anthony Kiedis, and the rest of the guys, and I said, 'Oh, we're going to take a cab and I'm going to photograph you breaking the wall!'.

So we got there and there were police everywhere. And they start to break down the wall. They're amazing images. I couldn't believe what was happening in front of me.

How would you like to be remembered?

I would like to be remembered as a guy who dedicated his life to the art of photography, his family and martial arts. One of the greatest accomplishments of my life has been becoming a photographer of Arabic descent. I have lived in Paris, London, Milan, New York, and Los Angeles, and working for many talented individuals. With a name like Haddi, I feel like God gave me all the lays. Thank you so much. I can go in peace.

Michel Haddi's work will be on display at the 29 Arts in Progress Gallery booth 422 during photo London 10-14 May. Courtyard Pavilion - Somerset House London.

Sun, 30 April 2023 at 7:01 pm GMT-4 · 4-min read

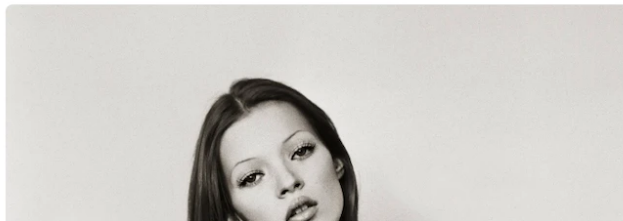

Michel Haddi is exhibiting photographs he took of Kate Moss and Cameron Diaz in London.

Haddi has photographed a host of celebrities, including Jennifer Lopez, Clint Eastwood, David Bowie, Tupac Shakur and Sir Sean Connery, and will showcase his images of other stars such as Uma Thurman and Linda Evangelista at international photography fair Photo London this month.

He recently discovered a series of rare Polaroid photos – while cleaning out his storage – of British supermodel Moss, in which he said she looks “very powerful”.

The images now form part of his new book, The Legend – Kate Moss.

Những bức ảnh ngực trần thời trẻ của Kate Moss do nhiếp ảnh gia huyền thoại Michel Haddi chụp dự kiến được trưng bày tại cuộc triển lãm ở London (Anh) vào giữa tháng 5.

Michel Haddi sinh năm 1956 đến từ Paris, Pháp. Ông là nhiếp ảnh gia nổi tiếng thế giới, từng làm việc với những tên tuổi đình đám như Jennifer Lopez, Clint Eastwood, David Bowie, Tupac Shakur và Sir Sean Connery...

Từ ngày 10-14/5, ông Haddi mở triển lãm ảnh tại hội chợ nhiếp ảnh quốc tế Photo London trong bảo tàng Somerset House ở London, Anh.

Tại sự kiện, Haddi sẽ trưng bày nhiều ảnh chụp về các ngôi sao hàng đầu như Uma Thurman, Linda Evangelista... Đáng chú ý nhất là loạt ảnh bán khỏa thân chưa từng công bố của siêu mẫu Anh Kate Moss.

Nhiếp ảnh gia 5X tiết lộ phát hiện những bức ảnh Polaroid (ảnh chụp lấy liền) về Kate Moss trong khi dọn dẹp kho lưu trữ.

Unearthed photos of Kate Moss and Cameron Diaz to go on display in London

News Home More from Entertainment News

Monday, May 1st, 2023 6:44am

Unearthed photographs of British supermodel Kate Moss and US actor Cameron Diaz are going on display in London.

The rare Polaroids were taken by celebrity photographer Michel Haddi in the 1990s during separate magazine photoshoots of the stars.

While clearing out his storage, Mr Haddi stumbled across the images.

During a 1991 photoshoot of Moss for British GQ, she posed topless on the edge of a sofa and in the next image she is pictured lying down.

Having met Moss at the Cannes Film Festival while she was dating Hollywood actor Johnny Depp, Mr Haddi compared her to "the mermaid of Copenhagen" – a nod to the famous bronze statue by Edvard Eriksen that sits in the harbour of Nyhavn, Copenhagen.

"I said: 'Oh my God, this girl is like a dream,' ... she doesn't care about nothing and she's so beautiful," he said.

"This was a girl that at the time was a big star then, but she said: 'Your photo work of Johnny is so beautiful. I will love that if you could do some like that of me.'

"I did some photographs of her there and then."

In 1993, Mr Haddi photographed Diaz for Vogue Homme Magazine.

Haddi has photographed a host of celebrities including Jennifer Lopez, Clint Eastwood, David Bowie, Tupac Shakur and Sir Sean Connery, and will be showcasing his images of other stars including Uma Thurman and Linda Evangelista at this month's Photo London international photo fair.

He recently discovered a set of rare Polaroid photos – while cleaning out his storage – of British supermodel Moss, in which he said she looks “very strong”.

The images are now part of his new book The Legend – Kate Moss.

The photographer, who had studios in London and California, said: “It made me very happy to go back in time because I met Kate in the 90’s when she wasn’t well known in LA.

“She was young and she looked like the mermaid of Copenhagen, I was like, ‘Oh my god, this girl is like a dream’ ... she doesn’t care and she’s so beautiful.”

Recalling working with Moss on a Bloomingdale shoot after meeting her in California, Haddi said, “I guess at first she didn’t think I liked her because I didn’t work with her in LA, but I couldn’t, I was (working), I’m still as shy as she (is).

Unearthed photographs of British supermodel Kate Moss and US actor Cameron Diaz are going on display in London.

The rare Polaroids were taken by celebrity photographer Michel Haddi in the 1990s during separate magazine photoshoots of the stars.

While clearing out his storage, Mr Haddi stumbled across the images.

During a 1991 photoshoot of Moss for British GQ, she posed topless on the edge of a sofa and in the next image she is pictured lying down.

Having met Moss at the Cannes Film Festival while she was dating Hollywood actor Johnny Depp, Mr Haddi compared her to “the mermaid of Copenhagen” – a nod to the famous bronze statue by Edvard Eriksen that sits in the harbour of Nyhavn, Copenhagen.

TPO - Những bức ảnh ngực trần thời trẻ của Kate Moss do nhiếp ảnh gia huyền thoại Michel Haddi chụp dự kiến được trưng bày tại cuộc triển lãm ở London (Anh) vào giữa tháng 5.

Michel Haddi sinh năm 1956 đến từ Paris, Pháp. Ông là nhiếp ảnh gia nổi tiếng thế giới, từng làm việc với những tên tuổi đình đám như Jennifer Lopez, Clint Eastwood, David Bowie, Tupac Shakur và Sir Sean Connery...

Từ ngày 10-14/5, ông Haddi mở triển lãm ảnh tại hội chợ nhiếp ảnh quốc tế Photo London trong bảo tàng Somerset House ở London, Anh.

Tại sự kiện, Haddi sẽ trưng bày nhiều ảnh chụp về các ngôi sao hàng đầu như Uma Thurman, Linda Evangelista... Đáng chú ý nhất là loạt ảnh bán khỏa thân chưa từng công bố của siêu mẫu Anh Kate Moss.

Nhiếp ảnh gia 5X tiết lộ phát hiện những bức ảnh Polaroid (ảnh chụp lấy liền) về Kate Moss trong khi dọn dẹp kho lưu trữ.

Ấn tượng với sự mãnh liệt của chân dài sinh năm 1974, ông biến chúng trở thành một phần của cuốn sách mới The Legend - Kate Moss.

Theo giới thiệu, những bức ảnh đen trắng được chụp tại British GQ ở New York vào năm 1991. Trong ảnh, Kate Moss để ngực trần ngồi trên mép ghế Sofa. Ở một bức khác, cô nằm dài trên ghế.

"Tôi rất vui khi nhìn lại quá khứ vì tôi gặp Kate vào những năm 1990. Lúc đó, cô ấy chưa được biết đến ở Los Angeles (California). Cô ấy còn trẻ và trông giống như nàng tiên cá của Copenhagen. Tôi thốt lên, 'Ồi Chúa ơi, cô gái này giống như một giấc mơ'. Cô ấy không quan tâm đến điều gì và cô ấy thật xinh đẹp", Haddi kể.

Unearthed photographs of British supermodel Kate Moss and US actor Cameron Diaz are going on display in London.

The rare Polaroids were taken by celebrity photographer Michel Haddi in the 1990s during separate magazine photoshoots of the stars.

While clearing out his storage, Mr Haddi stumbled across the images.

During a 1991 photoshoot of Moss for British GQ, she posed topless on the edge of a sofa and in the next image she is pictured lying down.

Having met Moss at the Cannes Film Festival while she was dating Hollywood actor Johnny Depp, Mr Haddi compared her to "the mermaid of Copenhagen" - a nod to the famous bronze statue by Edvard Eriksen that sits in the harbour of Nyhavn, Copenhagen.

"I said: 'Oh my God, this girl is like a dream,'... she doesn't care about nothing and she's so beautiful," he said.

"This was a girl that at the time was a big star then, but she said: 'Your photo work of Johnny is so beautiful. I will love that if you could do some like that of me.'"

"I did some photographs of her there and then."

In 1993, Mr Haddi photographed Diaz for Vogue Homme Magazine.
